

Exciting World

There's nothing casual about the news of the last 24 hours.

The "Free Greece" radio announcements that Markos Vafiades, commander of the guerrillas, has been thrown out because of his failure to conquer the Allied-supported government, Off-the-cuff comment in Athens, however, is that Vafiades wasn't merely removed—he is dead. The guy was born in Turkey. He oughta know better than to move to Greece—for history shows that most Turks who move to Greece get killed, and vice versa.

While the Allies were chasing an enemy in Greece they nearly lost a friend in Iran. The ruler, 29-year-old Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, was entering Tehran university for his wedding celebration when a news reporter shot him. But official reports said the shot was only nicked. There were five shots. One went through the shah's cheek, another into his side, and three through his hat. If that's only being picked up, it'd be a really wounded-in Iran.

An from Westover Field, Mass., comes a story that might have been invented by Hollywood. Two Russian army lieutenants who were supposed to be doing a 40-minute training flight over Poland took their plane instead to the American zone of Austria, crash-landed, and asked protection of America as political refugees. Russia demanded their return, but the boys were brought here by our military transport service.

Yes sir, it's an exciting world.

Virginia Wins Couple of Red Converts

By EDWARD V. ROBERTS

Richmond, Va., Feb. 5 —(UP)—Virginia gained a couple of converts from behind the iron curtain today and a former American navy cadet found out at least what that Russian girl said to him back in 1943.

That's the way things started as two former Russian air force lieutenants began to realize a dream that began two months ago when they heard a Voice of America broadcast describing the charms of old Virginia.

The Russians—Anatol Barsov and Peter Pirogov—arrived here last night as guests of the Dominion State Chamber of Commerce. It was the end of a journey that began last October when they "borrowed" a red air force plane and flew to the American zone of Austria.

One of the first to greet the travel-weary pair when they arrived here for a week's tour in Virginia was Ralph Turner, who was a navy cadet on the early wartime Navy Cadet Supply Run.

Now a university student, Turner said he had a problem—what that Soviet maiden said to him that day in Murmansk.

In talking Russian, Turner repeated what the girls had said and asked what it meant.

Pirogov grinned and said: "Means I don't understand."

Gov. William Tuck dropped in to welcome his state's guests. He made a little speech about Virginia's proud history and said: "Always glad to welcome converts."

Barsov said the most remarkable thing he'd seen so far in the United States was a red and green neon sign on the outskirts of Richmond.

"Cabs $2 and up," he said.

"Even in Moscow," he said, his eyes shining "there is not such as this. It is like fairyland."

The Russians will tour the state for a week, examining stores, homes and factories. And tonight they'll see their first American basketball game.

Pirogov said Russia has no planes capable of roundtrip bombing of continental United States.

He said the Soviets do not have the atomic bomb. But they have a little ditty, he said, which runs like this:

"The U. S. is trying to scare us with atom bombs, but when we get them from the proletariat we will have atom bomb too."

In Russian, it rhymes, he said.

Weather Causes 62 Deaths, Huge Damage in State

Little Rock, Feb. 5 —(UP)—Arkansas counted a loss of 62 lives and a minimum total property damage of $2,732,900 from destructive weather since Jan. 1. A United Press survey revealed today.

The south Arkansas tornado Jan. 3 caused the deaths of 57 persons, 55 at Warren alone. Five other persons died from exposure to sub-freezing temperatures.

But it has been the huge scope of property damage that paints the most adequate picture of the state's battering by the elements.

It is a picture of crop and livestock loss, broken power and communication lines, damaged highways and destroyed buildings.

Spokesmen for the state highway department now taking a survey of road damage, estimated the final figure would run "More than $1,000,000."

Conservative estimates on the Warren tornado damage by city officials and Bradley Lumber Co. officers place the figure at $1,000,000.

O. B. Brown, a statistician with the state extension service, placed the crop damage from freezes and flood waters "in the neighborhood of $200,000." He said at least 100 head of cattle with a total evaluation of $10,000 were lost in the lowlands along the flood-swollen rivers. Approximately 500 hogs valued at $7,500 also were lost.

The state's timber lands came in for their share of the damage. State Forester Fred Lang put the figure at $100,000. He also said that ice storms at Harrison and Fayetteville did approximately $25,000 damage to north Arkansas.

Telephone Co. lines in north Arkansas for an estimated loss of between $200,000 and $250,000 according to E. N. McCall, Little Rock manager.

Edgar Chestnut, publicity director for the Arkansas Power and Light Co., placed power line damage at $50,000.

Conservative estimates by Arkansas companies on wages lost by storm victims add up to $90,400.

Legislature to Take Longer Weekend

Little Rock, Feb. 5 —(P)—The Arkansas legislature was taking its customary week-end recess today, and there were reports that it may be a longer layoff next week-end.

The special election on Governor McMath's plan for issuing $28,000,000 in bonds to pay for better Arkansas highways comes up Tuesday, Feb. 15.

If the legislators quit next Friday and came back the following Monday as they customarily do they'd have cut again almost immediately if they went home to vote.

Talk of a recess from next Friday until the following Wednesday was heard in the senate yesterday.

Several senators, however, said they didn't believe the general assembly should recess that long.

McMath said he isn't backing a long recess, but that he would favor the legislators being at home to vote and answer any questions concerning the highway program. He suggested a recess might be taken Wednesday.

The house yesterday completed legislative action on a bill to appropriate $60,000 for the special election.

The bill previously passed by the senate, was sent to the governor.

Meanwhile McMath said other important administration legislation will begin appearing in both houses of the legislature next week. Included will be a revised election code.

The senate quit for the week-end at noon yesterday.

The house stayed a little longer, receiving a proposal to eliminate the Arkansas legislative council before it finished its business at 1 p. m. Rep. Dolan Burr of Pope county is author of the bill which would repeal the act setting up the council.

State Insurance Commissioner J. T. Graves said a fair trade practices bill to regulate the insurance business will be introduced in the legislature next week.

Such a law has been "virtually demanded" under an act of Congress, Graves said.

The proposed state law would penalize misrepresentation as to policy contracts or financial statements and would prohibit discrimination as to policy holders of the same class or expectation of life.

In the insurance department hearings and appeals to the courts are provided.

Dr. Wold's disclosures were made in his recent book, "Mr. President—How Is Your Health?"

Excerpts from which are printed in the current issue of Look magazine. The book is a collection of medical fact dealing with all presidents.

Rep. A. L. Miller (R-Neb) called attention to the book earlier this week. He said the late president probably would be alive if the people had been told the truth about his health.

The book traces Mr. Roosevelt's gradual deterioration from robust to poor health under the tremendous burden of responsibilities as a wartime president.

Lass Overcomes Obstacles to Wed U. S. Soldier

Los Angeles, Feb. 5 —(AP)—A Scots lass met a soldier back in 1945.

Romance ensued.

Last fall he mailed her postage money to Glasgow.

But a shipping firm lost her ticket.

Then a strike cancelled sailings.

She boarded the Queen Mary and it ran aground in Glasgow.

Persistent—she tried a plane, and made it.

That's how Gavina Brown, 23, became the belated-but-happy wife of Kenneth Brown, 23, of nearby Compton.

U. S., Britain Good Will Going All Out—They Now Exchange Factory Workers

By HAL BOYLE

New York, Feb. 5 —(AP)—A 22-year-old girl factory worker is among America's leading exports this month to Great Britain.

And hazel-eyed Mary Uglanitz hopes the empire will ship one of its gal factory workers right back to complete the international exchange of labor good will.

That's the idea she thought up—all by herself—and it looks like it will be carried out.

She hopes that factory workers from our two countries can learn to understand each other by comparing how they live," said Mary nervously.

Mary works for the Duro Test fluorescent lighting plant at North Bergen, N. J. Some weeks ago she got to thinking the pleasant idea her brother, a former sergeant in the eighth air force, had told about his stay in England.

"We are exchanging students, technical advisors, lecturers and farming specialists," she thought. "Why shouldn't we exchange factory workers? Maybe they have something to teach us, and maybe we have something to teach them."

So she went in and proposed an international exchange of factory workers to her boss, Walter Simon, president of the corporation.

"Wasn't that some nerve?" said Mary, telling about it later.

Well, President Simon didn't think it was. He broadened her suggestion for a week-end and then called Mary back in.

"I think your idea of an exchange of workers is a good one," he said. "How about you being the first one?"

Of course she said yes. Since she was feminine, and girls are always practical, that was probably behind her original idea—that she might be the one chosen to test it.

And now, after weeks of semi-mystical preparation, she is ready to sail for England on the Queen Mary next week. For a month or two she will leave her 40-hour-a-week, $42 job for what her brother, a steelworker, calls the eighth air force, had told about his stay in England.

"I am going to work in a British factory just as the girls out there do," she said, "and learn what I can."

Mary speaks of England as "out there." Certainly it is a long way from where her Russian-born parents settled in New Jersey. She feels she is a typical American girl factory worker, and she probably is.

She lives in a four-room apartment with her father, invalid mother and two sisters. She washes, dries and helps make her own clothes. She and her young sister Vera, get up at 6:30 a. m. and travel ten miles by bus to be at the factory by 7:30.

"Whoever gets her face on first fixes breakfast," Mary said. "And we use the same spoon to stir our coffee so we won't have too many things to wash before we leave."

Mary doesn't doubt she will find plenty of British friends because her brother did in wartime—and she will write regularly to the Uglanitz family.

"The only thing I am buying to go overseas is a simple black dress," she said. "Otherwise I'll just take what I've got. I want to sight-see all I can, and I would like to see some of the princesses' family—one of the princesses' maids."

Mary said she didn't look to spend the day with them—any more than she would with President and Mrs. Truman.

"I'm not a glamorous girl," she said. "I'm just ordinary Mary."

And she feels she will get the same royal welcome among her fellow workers in England as any British factory girl would find in America.

"There must be a lot we can learn from each other," she said.

U. S. to Gamble on Airpower in Event of War

Boston, Feb. 5 —(AP)—Gen. Omar Bradley says the United States would gamble with survival by counting on air power alone to defeat the enemy in another war.

"To survive," he said, "The United States must be prepared instantly to gear its counter-attack to a war of increasing violence, a war of growing intensity, and a war of widening global dimensions."

He told the third national industry-army day conference last night that at the instant of aggression "the United States must fling the full force of its strategic air offensive against the enemy's heartland."

But however savage this attack might be," he added, "it is dangerous for us to count on a decisive knockout in the first round, for the concentration of this initial air offensive must diminish our experience and increase the enemy's experience and increase the enemy's experience and increase the enemy's experience."

The army chief of staff said that he is convinced that if the United States is driven into another war "we shall once more be forced to gain the inevitable victory over our deadly enemies through the sacrifice of our soldiers on the ground."

"If we are to construct air power at the fatal expense of ground and naval arms," he added, "then we may foolishly be forced to desert our allies and forsake our capacity to wage a sustained war."

A spokesman for the Greek army said yesterday from the "Free Greece" radio, supported army suspicions that Markos had been executed for failing to "conquer Greece."

Greek government circles said they consider the action against Markos a result of the conflict between the Communist and Marshall Tito of Yugoslavia. They said the Communist party has put the Greek Communist party under its complete domination.

Alexander Panagos, generalissimo of the Greek armed forces, said he interpreted the broadcast to mean Markos—who preferred to be known by this single name—had been dismissed as commander of the Communist-backed rebel forces. He said he could not confirm Markos had been killed, but he said the announcement clearly indicated he was "finished."

Foreign Minister Constantine Tsaldaris said "obviously there is a purge in the leadership of the Communist party."

The Markos radio announced the guerrilla chief, a long-time ally of the Communist party, had been "seriously ill" for several months and could not "carry out important tasks assigned him."

It said the central committee of the Greek Communist party, at a meeting on Mount Grammos, on Jan. 31, "relieved the ailing Markos of his political and military responsibilities. No successor was mentioned."

On the agenda of the meeting, the announcement added, was a discussion of "the opportunist rightist movement in the Communist party."

These were the developments yesterday.

The New York stock market, the barometer that predicted the 1929 collapse, took its soundest beating in many months, with 61 stocks selling at the lowest price in more than a year.

Also in New York, bond prices suffered one of the sharpest declines of the last 12 months, with nearly 125 issues sagging, some as much as two points.

The Chicago grain market was hit by a storm of selling, with corn, oats, and soybeans falling so swiftly that one trader described the market as "demoralized."

The Associated Press index of 35 wholesale commodities dropped nearly a full point, reaching 168.48, the lowest mark since Feb. 6, 1947.

Loose lard was offered on the Chicago board of trade of $12 a hundred pounds, the lowest point in six years.

The Pennsylvania railroad said it was laying off 2,500 of the 45,350 men in its maintenance and equipment department. They will be furloughed for an indefinite period.

Altogether, the census bureau reported in Washington, there were 2,000,000 more unemployed in January than in December.

Actually, the true drop was only 700,000. Officials said the other 1,300,000 reported as jobless really were part of the nation's normal working force—they were probably holiday employees, students, or others who no longer seek jobs.

An auto transport was crowded off the highway and overturned about 6 p.m. yesterday at Waver's crossing, west on Highway 67. The driver, Norman Niederberger of St. Louis, was unhurt.

State Policeman Mosier said the vehicle was forced off the road by another transport driven by Bobby L. Bentley of England, Ark., which was attempting to pass a car.

Fulbright Sees Repeal of Tax on Oleo

Washington, Feb. 5 —(AP)—Senator Fulbright (D-Ark) predicted yesterday that congress will repeal federal taxes on oleomargarine.

Noting that the Tennessee legislature this week voted to repeal state taxes on margarine, Fulbright said in a statement that the trend is definitely toward repeal of such levies.

"In the house of representatives, hearings on bills repealing the federal anti-margarine legislation have been set for March 1-4," he said.

"I look for speedy action by the house agriculture committee and I am confident that the house will repeal the anti-margarine laws. I am also confident that the senate will take similar action when the time comes to the test in this body."

Fulbright was a leader in the margarine repeal fight last year. The legislation passed the house but did not get through the senate.

A spokesman for the Greek army said yesterday from the "Free Greece" radio, supported army suspicions that Markos had been executed for failing to "conquer Greece."

Fair Enough

Chicago, Feb. 3 —(AP)—Apart from changes that may be made in federal and state laws, great political arrangements are taking place within the unions themselves. Some of the old parasites are retiring on royal pensions, having held office longer than most kings ever did. As I have pointed out, even within before, 25-hour travel, cowardly twinges of fear as renegade Catholics. They betrayed their comrades in a scramble to get right with God.

This was an enormous defeat for C.I.O. unions were the most important for the Communists invaded outside the White House, the Supreme court and the departments of state and justice. They are left powerless in the union racket. The few loudly sanctimonious brands of may be the bulwark of the union honor that is paid the pig who rooks up a truffle. The fruits of their perfidy are tasty, but they are even less worthy of trust than the traitors whom they double-crossed, and should be held in suspicion henceforth as before.

On the non-Communist or mercenary front of union politics it is now evident that Dan Tobin, the emperor-president of the Teamsters union, may at last be written off as a rotund barnacle and historic mountebank. He will be unwelcome even to his time on earth by men on inferior wages who are forced to keep him in panoply and luxury to pay for even his booze and his roulette stacks as long as he lives.

While Tobin maintains a fictitious status of ascended spirit being guiding the jerky works of Dave Beck, his successor, from the Royal Winter Palace on Miami Beach, the fact is that Beck pushed him out. He had to go. Mr. Beck, late of Seattle where he ranked as grand scamp of the west, maneuvered himself into a new post of convention. Pared Tobin to create this job for him and equip it with plenary powers, subject to the royal verboten which Darnow is afraid to wield.

Devotion of these teachings will recall that once time ago I revealed a progress of tawdry splendor through the northwest arranged in honor of Tobin by Beck. It was comparable to some grim farce of captive people arranged by Heydrich in honor of Hitler. Nevertheless, it was a royal ceremony preliminary to Tobin's retirement full of honors and Napoleon Brandy in nice proportions. In exposing the meaning of this parade of inspections, dinners, spontaneous rallies in honor of the great man, I seem to have embarrassed both Tobin and Beck. Therefore, the old fellow deferred his quitting and when, at last, a few weeks ago, he did get out, he slunk away to Florida and oozed off without announcement.

As executive vice-president with great powers, Beck is Dan's successor to all but the title. Incidentally, here again we find the comic seeming of divinity which is common among this kind. Tobin's attitude toward Beck is reminiscent of the father's toward the son.

Beck is not a union great, common motions within the teamsters union of one million subjects, including milkers, embalmers, pallbearers, cosmeticians, cannery workers and, of course, local and house hand laborers. Beck has been operating in Chicago to the alarm of John O'Brien, the regular regional vice-president, whom he has superseded like a gaulter from Berkeley.

Beck has a new plan of organization which, under Truman, probably will make him the most powerful individual in the history of the union movement and certainly the most brutal since John L. Lewis ran the C. I. O. He is abolishing the old regional divisions and creating a system of about 15 craft jurisdictions. Each will have national jurisdiction over its craftsmen and, consequently, over the respective industries. Each will have a vice-president responsible to Beck who can be superseded in case of rebellion. In combination, these craft units will control not only the distribution of an enormous amount of food but even the preparation of much of it and the economic life of the farmers and fishermen who produce it.

The control of cannery workers is essential to this phase. Through them he can control the producers who include many great corporate farms with no more pride, principle or conscience than soulless corporations ever have. Beck is another fact that he is improving in a benign intent to undermine the lot of the workers.

Beck is actually creating a new C. I. O. and has shown great power and statesmanship in putting this over. His skill in disposing of Tobin was admirable from the professional standpoint. He may have used intimidation. The old faker has been a great gambler on the horses and late sports for years. Even President Truman's old boss, Tom Pendergast, couldn't lick those chances. Beck, a cold-eyed, cold-blooded aspirant who has no vice about ambition, watched Tobin for years and knew all about him.

Tobin pulled the rug from under himself when he asked Truman to promise him the job of secretary of labor. He knew that a good politician should have known that a record made him unavailable for any such trust even under Truman, aside from the obvious fact that C. I. O. and railroad brotherhoods would have to oppose and deter the majority of the vice-presidents from endorsing Truman. Truman, of course, learned of this and that was another reason why Tobin's time was up.

Taking one consideration with another, Dan was wise to retire to his winter palace on Miami Beach. There he is, flattered by all the comic rites of low-low, a burden on his subjects $30,000 a year and all expenses paid $10,000 for his income tax, plus the palace itself including servants, and, by special constitutional provision, plus the providence of any and all booze required for his royal peace and hygiene.

Bobcats Take Camden 27-26 in Thriller

The Hope Bobcats came from behind last night to post the favored Camden Panthers 27 to 26 in a thrilling contest that had a packed house on the edge of their seats.

It was the second loss of the season for Camden and the eighth straight Bobcat win. Strange enough most Bobcat wins have been only a few points and last night's was the closest.

The game was tied 4-all at the end of the first period and the second stanza was almost disastrous for the Bobcats as they trailed 16 to 8 at the half. The score was 21 to 17 closing the third period and Hope started clicking, scoring 10 points to Camden's five.

Camden's Joe Phillips was high scorer with 15 followed by Buddy Sutton of Hope with 12.

In the opening game the Hope Juniors won 23 to 17 after a hard fought struggle.
